

The Case of . . . Game! Set! Match! The Volleyball Playing Dog That Broke the Internet!

The Scene

A video of a dog playing volleyball with her three human companions has taken the internet by storm!

In the footage, the talented canine can be seen perfectly striking the ball and helping her partner volley with players on the other side of the net.

Since first being shared, the video has been viewed over 100,000 times, receiving thousands of comments from both fans and skeptics alike. Some claim that the footage of the sporty pup brings new meaning to the phrase “man’s best friend.” Others point out that if the feel-good story looks “too good to be true,” it probably is.

Possible Clues (Questions to Think About)

- Triggers: Is there anything about this story that makes us hope that it’s true? Do those feelings influence our ability to determine what’s real and what isn’t?
- Access: Does the presence of comments and/or like and share counts affect your ability to determine fact from fiction?
- Forensics: How can we locate the original source of the information?
- Motives: If this story turns out to be false or misleading, what kind of person would create/spread it?

Is this story legit, or have people been served a foul?
